THE GRIEST FAMILY

Compiled by

Samuel Benjamin Cross

Westhampton Beach, N. Y.

1953

It must be admitted that a work like this is exceedingly liable to errors. Many of the names and dates have passed through copyings by several hands. In each copying there was the chance of an error in figure or letter, and also the possibility of the incorporation of a new idea in spelling. Where data concerning certain members of a family have been obtained from more than one source, the dates, and even the names, have often differed slightly. The spelling of the names is shown as they appear in the records, and where the records show a difference in dates, both dates have been copied. Attention is called to the change in the Calendar in 1752. The day following Sept. 2, 1752 was Sept. 14, 1752 and the first day of the year was changed from Mar. 25th to Jan. 1st.

The early members of the family are shown by number to distinguish them. The others, where their relationship is known, are shown by generation and number. They begin with an estimated third generation.

The writer has received valuable information and help in different ways from so many individuals that it would be impossible to name all, therefore I can but collectively thank one and all most heartily for their help and interest. Miss Anna M. Black of Flora Dale, Penna. has been very helpful.

p.7 #4-1. The following was probably written by #7-40 William Griest in Feb. 1916. "An incident of more than ordinary interest occurred in the family. (#6-13) Susanna's paternal grandfather (#4-1) was a man who was highly respected and influential in the community. He had a neighbor who had a son who was incorrigible, but this man, Daniel Griest, could sometimes quiet him. They sent for him one day to come over as the boy was behaving in a bad way. Just as he got in the house the young man came downstairs with his rifle in his hand. Grandfather said, 'Why, thee don't intend to shoot me.' Just then he put the gun to his shoulder and shot him through the breast. They carried him out in the orchard where he died that evening. According to their way of stating, it happened on the 7th day of the week, the 7th day of the month, the 7th month of the year 1777. The murderer was finally acquitted on the plea of insanity." NOTE: the year 1777 was probably incorrect as July 7th came on a Monday that year, but it did come on a Saturday in 1787. Also Daniel had a son Levi b.11/1/1780.

"Thomas Brown was born about the year 1790. I have no means of finding out whether it was in Pa. or Maryland. His parents came from England a few years before that time. His father was the son of a wealthy manufacturer who his parents thought married beneath him, and refused to recognize his wife as an equal. His father offered him a good dwelling and to retain him in the business but his wife would not consent to this and they emigrated to America where he soon afterward died. As they did not correspond with the home people, they were lost sight of. Thomas always thought that his father's people made an effort to find him. He even heard of some Englishmen who were looking for people and thought they might be his parents. He never heard from his own people. His mother died when he was quite small and he had to depend entirely upon strangers for a home. He lived for a time with a rough and grasping man who made him do work entirely too hard for a boy his age and did not send him to school. There were no compulsory educational laws then nor even any free public schools. He drove a team of six horses freighting over the mountains when he was only eleven years old. He was not strong enough to handle the heavy harness, and had to get somebody to throw the harness on the horses' backs. These wagoners, as they were called, were often rough but generally kind and gave help when asked for. He would then tie the hamestrings and finish harnessing and hitch to the wagon. About 1820 he was married to Susanna Griest, a member of one of the oldest pioneer families of the State, having come to the colony in 1635 and were, of course, staunch members of the Society of Friends. In after years, he united with the Society."

8-30.40 Minerva E., d.1870 8-30.41 Leander M., d.1895
 David G. then m., 1866, Sarah Elizabeth Mills Boyd, of Dr. John Mills and Sarah _____, and widow of Joseph Boyd. They had:

8-30.50 Edwin Joel perhaps 8-30.51 Charles.

The following was probably written by #7-40 William Griest in Feb. 1916. "David (#7-28), as they called him, spent much of his early life with his uncle (#6-15) John Griest moving from near Harrisburg, Pa., to Jay Co., Ind., in the month of April 1850. He drove one of the teams, a one-horse wagon, coming through Dayton passing along the National Road, afterwards Third Street on which he afterward lived for so many years. He was wont to contrast his condition from the young rough looking man driving an emigrant wagon to the successful businessman in his comfortable home.

His father, mother and all the rest of the family emigrated to Iowa about the year 1853. D.G. (#7-28) had learned the tailor trade in the east and for a few years he followed it in Camden, Ind. but it was as a salesman that he excelled. He taught school a few terms, was one of the pioneer teachers of Jay Co. He was in the drygoods business in Camden with Dr. Mills, afterwards his father-in-law. Afterwards he was employed by a firm selling fruit trees of which Joseph Boyd was a member.

During the time he was employed by Boyd and Williams, D.G. and wife and Joe Boyd and wife spent a considerable part of the summer in western Missouri, or rather the ladies spent the time at the hotel while their husbands were canvassing. A peculiar coincidence was that after the death of Mrs. Brown and Mr. Boyd, Mr. Brown married Mrs. Boyd. Mr. Boyd was accidentally killed in 1861 or 1862; Mrs. Brown died in 1863 and is buried in the old cemetery at Pennville, Ind. D.G. Brown formed a partnership with Lukens Griffith. It was known as the firm of Brown and Griffith. They sold fruit and ornamental trees for the first year in northern Missouri. I think this was the year 1858. The next year they went south and did business in Alabama and Mississippi. He was in Miss. at the time of the John Brown's raid at Harper's Ferry. His people were uneasy for awhile for the feeling in the south was very bitter against any northern man. His wit and diplomacy carried him through without any difficulty. He related this incident. Someone asked him if he was any relation of Ossawatimie Brown (that was a nickname they had for John Brown, so named because he had lived on the banks of the Ossawatimie Creek in Kansas). He answered, 'I do not know, but you may call me Possawatimie Brown for I am very fond of possums.' (They were a favorite dish in that country.) Just then the landlord came to his aid and said, 'Let us go on a possum hunt one night soon'. They all being fond of possum meat, too, a hunt was planned. But whether they ever went, history sayeth not, but it turned the subject of the conversation for the time. Both Boyd & Williams and Brown & Griffith sold an excellent grade of trees, buying them of the Rochester, N.Y. nurseries, then considered the finest nurseries in the United States. From 1859 until 1861 or 1862 they lived in Pennville, then called Camden. In 1861 or 1862 he began traveling for a Dayton wholesale house selling queensware. Leaving that firm he began selling drygoods for Darst, Heckelrode & Co. After a few years he went into wholesale grocery business with one Mr. Comer under the name of Comer & Brown and, after a time, Mr. Darst took an interest in the business and the firm was Comer, Brown & Darst. After closing out the grocery business, he started in the soap business. At first, on a small scale in connection with his son and with a partner who was supposed to have a knowledge of the soap business. He soon found out that the man - I forget his name - was no good. Mr. Brown had to make the formula for a new soap. He did this so effectively that D.G. Brown's Tar and Barber Soap had the reputation of being the best on the market.

D.G. Brown was noted for his large-hearted liberality. An unfortunate or a person in need never appealed in vain for assistance. He was often imposed on but would say, 'I would rather give where the parties were not worthy than to know that one in distress should suffer'. Belonging to many lodges and fraternal orders was another evidence of his social nature. He loved men and delighted to mingle with them. While making no pretense as an orator he was a forceful and eloquent speaker, having few equals as an after dinner extemporaneous orator."

THE GRIEST FAMILY.

The early history of the Griest Family is still indefinite. The records that have been found up to the present time are listed here in the hope that more data will be discovered and someone in the future may be able to determine the true relationship that existed between these members. It is believed that all of those listed are closely related as all members of the Griest Family found to date appear to be descendants of John Griest and Martha Baldwin. A great many of the descendants have collected data on the family at various times. Among them was Edwin C. Tyson of Flora Dale, Adams Co., Pa. His papers were given to the Menallen Meeting. Also Charles W. Griest of York Springs, Adams Co. His manuscript was accidentally destroyed but many of the letters from his files have been saved. In 1941 Albert Cook Myers stated, "Charles W. Griest of York Springs, Adams Co. who died in 1894, was constantly engaged for eight years prior to this date in collecting data of descendants of John Griest, 'A Friend', who was settled on the Delaware prior to Penn's first visit to the colony in 1682."

In a letter on 23 Oct. 1940, Mrs. Lillian Griest Hoskins of Haddon Heights, N.J. states, "John Griest came from England (through Holland I believe)."

In the year 1738, among the first settlers coming to this new land west of the Susquehanna River was John Gr~~e~~ist, an English Quaker. Greist built for his family a two-story limestone blockhouse, 16 feet square. It was typical of that day when men's homes, in addition to protection from the elements, were built to withstand the constant danger of attack from hostile Indians. The original building had a door and three windows facing the road on the first story and on the second story four windows, each window of two sashes, each sash containing six panes of glass. Truly a sign of financial affluence in those days of oiled paper and casement windows. Greist's home, erected only five years after Penn's heirs permitted land grants to be issued in York County, was the first Inn west of "The River", the original structure that today, greatly enlarged, is "Ye Olde Valley Inn". John Greist sold the Inn in 1755. This Inn stands on the Lincoln Highway, Route 30, two miles east of York, Pa. It is about nine miles west of Wrightsville and just north of Grist Creek.

On 7/23/1742 a warrant was issued to John Greist for 31 $\frac{1}{2}$ for 200 Ac, on the Bermudian Creek in Adams Co., Pa. The land grant was dated 11/27/1757.

John and Rebecca are buried at Springboro, Warren Co., Ohio. (40 miles north of Cincinnati). There are some notes about the family on pages 7 and 8 of the Oct. 1949 issue of the Garretson News.

NOTE ON ELIZABETH THOMAS: (1) Lewis Walker m., 1693, Mary Morris and lived at Radnor, Pa. They came from Wales and had (2) Daniel Walker who m. Lydia _ _ _ and had (3) Rebecca Walker who m. Jacob Thomas of Peter Thomas and Eliz Goodwin, and had

(4) Elizabeth Thomas, b.10/4/1748, who m. William Bateman, b. 8/1/1742 in Wales.

The following is from the diary of #6-70 Phoebe Garretson. "William and Elizabeth Bateman had a home in Chester Co., Pa. It was built of limestone, with wide stone steps. They also had a deer park on the side of the hill. The wild deer would jump over the fence on the higher or upper side of the woods into the park with the tame deer and then could not jump out again up the hill. They continued to live in Penna. until 1814 when they moved to Ohio. In a few weeks they and their son and sons-in-law had laid out a town on their land which they named Springborough because of some strong springs there which furnished power for two flour mills and a woolen factory within the distance of a mile. A woolen factory and one flour mill are still in operation on nearly the same site. William Bateman and two of his sons (or sons-in-law) built brick residences near together and laid off streets, walks, etc. and named the suburb Spring Garden. This continued to be William and Elizabeth Bateman's home. It is still called Spring Garden."

At a very early age she was discovered to be a child of marked and unusual ability, At six she recited poems usually too difficult for most adults, and at nine gave the Arbor day and 4th of July orations in her home town. At eleven she began writing her own selections, and at seventeen had written the words and melody of thirty songs, some of which found high ranking. Later she took a non de plume and devoted her time to writing poetry and original Lyceum work, producing volumes of poetry and fiction. Her higher education was received at Whittier College, Iowa Wesleyan University and in special courses in the University of Chicago. In 1895 she published a volume of poems on the 'Klu Klux Klan' and lectured against that organization." This information was found in a copy of her Chautauqua program.
